Designation Study Background

On April 16, 2010, Councilmember Lisa Goodman moved to nominate the property known as the Charles B. Lyon House, 425 Oak Grove Street, for local designation. She also moved to establish interim historic protections pursuant to Minneapolis Code of Ordinances §599.240(b) covering all internal and external alterations to buildings, accessory structures and landscape features on the property. This included demolitions, additions, renovations and other improvements. She did so with support from Citizens for a Loring Park Community (CLPC). Councilmember Goodman’s motion included direction that the Planning Director be directed to prepare the necessary documentation to bring this nomination forward to the Historic Preservation Commission (HPC) no later than June 22, 2010. The City Council adopted this motion.

After completing an initial review, CPED brought the nomination to the Heritage Preservation Commission and noted that that the property may exhibit at least two of the local designation criteria found in section 599.210 of the Heritage Preservation Ordinance; the property’s exemplification of the Shingle Style and its association with a significant person, Charles B. Lyon (Criterion 2 and 4). On May 18, 2010, the Heritage Preservation Commission adopted staff findings and approved the nomination of 425 Oak Grove Street as a landmark; established interim protection; and directed the Planning Director to prepare a designation study.

This study is intended to fulfill the requirements for local historic designation outlined in Title 23, Chapter 599.230 of the Minneapolis Code of Ordinances. The study is based on a review of resources listed in Part 6: Sources and References.

PART 1: PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPERTY

This section is intended to give a specific description of the physical characteristics of the key components of what is under consideration on this property: the building, landscape, and other features of the property.

Parcel location, shape, and size

The Charles B. Lyon House at 425 Oak Grove Street is located in the Loring Park Neighborhood, a neighborhood in the southwest corner of downtown Minneapolis (Figure 1, Page 29 and Figure 2, Page 30). Today, Oak Grove Street has a variety of uses including residential, office, and a religious institution. The western portion of this street retains its late 19th century/early 20th century feeling to a high degree of integrity with the retention of the late 19th century residential structures at 419 and 425 Oak Grove Street, and the early 20th century St. Marks Church building, Northwestern National Life Insurance Company Building and the Women's Club. Many of the late 19th and early 20th century structures on the eastern portion of Oak Grove Street have been torn down and replaced by parking lots over the past 60 years (Figure 1, Page 29).

The Charles B. Lyon House is the gateway to the residential development of Oak Grove Street. Oak Grove Street starts at Lyndale Avenue South. At the site of the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company Building (430 Oak Grove Street), a split exists with Oak Grove Street and 15th Street West. Oak Grove Street curls south, where it angles away from 15th Street West. After crossing Spruce Place, Oak Grove Street runs parallel with West 15th Street to Nicollet Avenue. Originally, Oak Grove Street extended to Nicollet Avenue, however, after 1951; the intersection with Nicollet Avenue was ended.

The parcel at 425 Oak Grove Street is rectangular in shape. The lot is 58 feet wide in the front, 80 feet wide in the rear, 145 feet deep on the western portion of the property, and 149 feet wide on the eastern portion of the property (approximately 8,037 square feet)¹.

The Charles Brayton (C.B.) Lyon House is a three-story residence built in 1890 in the Shingle Style (Figure 3, Page 31 and Figure 4, Page 32). It is one of a few remaining opulent, late 1800s residences in Loring Park. The original construction of the house measured 30 feet by 54 feet. A 12 foot by 14 foot sun porch was added to the front of the house in 1909. In 1987 a large, two-story, rear addition was added to the house. The rear addition has an open first floor that provides vehicular parking. On top of the second floor is a rooftop deck (Figure 5, Page 33).

Description of building(s) on the property

The subject property contains one building. Though it began as a single-family residence, it was converted into a rooming house/nursing home in 1954, and then converted into an office in 1987^{2 3}.

Description of the primary structure

Date(s) of construction: The C.B. Lyon House was constructed by Frank Griggs (F.G.) McMillan for Charles Brayton Lyon in 1890 for $6,000.⁴ The 12' by 14' foot sun porch was added to the front elevation in 1909⁵. A large rear addition was added to the house in 1987⁶.

Location, placement, and orientation of building on the site: The home is located roughly in the southwest portion of the lot and faces northeast toward downtown Minneapolis.

Size and massing: 425 Oak Grove Street is a three-story residence laid out in a simple plan with a projecting bay on the west side of the principal elevation⁷. The original construction of the house measured 30 feet by 54 feet. The front tower and irregular fenestration lend the building an asymmetrical appearance (Figure 4, Page 32). The C.B. Lyon House is comparable in size and massing to its neighbor to the east, The Daniel B. Lyon House. Today, the house at 425 Oak Grove Street including the 1987 addition and basement is approximately 8,339 square feet⁸.

Architectural Style: The C.B. Lyon house is designed in the Shingle Style and sits on a rugged limestone foundation (Figure 5, Page 33). It contains a side-gabled roof with an asymmetrical placed tower on the front façade. The side-gabled roof is steeply pitched. The cornice contains a modillion course. Within the eaves the original rafter tails and dentils exist. A corbelled chimney is located near the west elevation at the rear of the original construction. It is unknown if the house originally contained a shingled roof. The first reroofing permit was pulled in 1965; the house currently has asphalt shingles (Figure 4, Page 32.) Note: It is typical for Shingle-Style houses to have their original wooden shingles replaced with composition shingles such as the case with 425 Oak Grove Street⁹.

The tower on the front elevation extends from the second floor to the third floor. The tower and front façade are united by the extended front wall of the tower and the upper band of windows. In typical Shingle Style it blends into the main volume of the house and reads as a half-tower rather than a stand alone element.

Most Shingle-Style houses have a continuous wall cladding of unpainted wood shingles. The C.B. Lyon house has textured wood shingles on the third story, on the eaves of the west elevation bay window, and the bump out on the west elevation nearest the front of the house. These shingles are currently painted green and were painted a shade of white as far back as 1949 (Figure 16, Page 45). The main exterior material on the first and second stories is narrow wood clapboard siding. The clapboard siding on the first floor of the west elevation was replaced after 1976 with slightly wider clapboard siding (compare Figure 3, Page 31 and Figure 4, Page 32).

The original front porch spans the length of the original construction. The porch has a centered entrance, contains simple, square wood columns, and a scroll-sawn railing.

The original fenestration pattern is highly intact. The windows are not symmetrical in placement. However, with the exception of the staircase windows on the west elevation, the windows are top aligned thus forming a horizontal band on each floor. The ornate windows in the house include the arched windows and a circular window on the west elevation. In addition, the house contains diamond pane casement windows on the top floor and leaded glass windows on the first floor. The Palladian-motif window on the west elevation is not original (compare Figure 3, Page 31 and Figure 4, Page 32), however, the opening of the semicircular window on the east elevation is original (compare Figure 16, Page 45 and Figure 5, Page 33). All windows on the south elevation are part of the 1987 addition (Figure 5, Page 33).

Known original elements that are deteriorated or missing: With the large rear, two-story addition that was completed in 1987, the original detail of the C.B. Lyon house on the (rear) elevation has been covered over and likely removed (Figure 5, Page 33).

Description of secondary structure(s)

No other structures stand on the lot.

Description of landscape and landscape features

From the Oak Grove Street sidewalk, a walkway to the house is elevated five steps and another five steps ascend to an open front porch that extends across the full width of the façade. A concrete retaining wall serves as the buildings western property line. On the east side of the property, a mature tree is situated near the principal structure. The eastern side of the property also includes a driveway and modern retaining wall that was likely built in 1987.

Topography, terrain, and vegetation: The lot at 425 Oak Grove Street slopes upward to the south and the east. The slope of the lot is approximately 10.5 percent from the northwest corner of the lot to the southeast corner of the lot. The vegetation consists of turf grass in the front yard. Pavement has been added to the east and rear portions of the lot for the driveway that leads to the rear parking area (Figure 5, Page 33).

PART 2: HISTORIC SIGNIFICANCE

The subject property is historically significant for its representation of Loring Park's brief tenure as Minneapolis' home for upper class families, for its embodiment of the Shingle Style, and for its association with master builder, Senator Frank Griggs (F.G.) McMillan. These three areas of significance are all interrelated.

Loring Park Neighborhood

425 Oak Grove Street is associated with distinctive elements of neighborhood identity. After the completion of Central (Loring) Park in 1885, Oak Grove Street became a premier location for professionals to build high-style single-family residences. The Charles B. Lyon House at 425 Oak Grove Street is a tangible remnant of this period in Loring Park's history.

The neighborhood known today as Loring Park got its start back in 1855. Samuel J. Jewett made the first official foray into the neighborhood, filing a 160 acre claim for his brother-in-law Joseph Smith Johnson. J.S. Johnson purchased the property at what was then the southwestern corner of the town and that today is bounded by Nicollet Avenue on the east, Franklin Avenue on the south, Lyndale Avenue on the west, and Grant Street on the north, for $1.25 per acre¹⁰ (Figure 7, Page 35). All of Loring Park was within the original town limits of Minneapolis¹¹.

Joseph Smith Johnson named what is now known as Loring Pond, Jewett Lake, after his wife. However, it was more generally referred to as Johnson's Pond until the Park Board purchased the land in 1883.

The land where Loring Park is currently located was purchased from J.S. Johnson and Allen Harmon in 1883 by the newly formed Minneapolis Park Board. The park was named Central Park. It was completed in 1885 following the designs of landscape architect H.W.S. Cleveland and under the direction of park superintendent William M. Berry¹².

When the Park Board of Minneapolis secured the Central Park tract in 1883, the smaller lake was excavated from the old swamp and the great lake was considerably enlarged and its banks built up from the sediment taken out. With the addition of several acres to the park in 1890, it was renamed Loring Park in honor of the first president of the Park Board, Charles M. Loring¹³.

It was the swampy land and uneven topography that hindered development to the south of Loring Park prior to 1885. Years prior to the creation of Central Park, Charles Loring considered building his home across from Johnson's Lake. However, he decided it was too far and too remote of a location to travel to and from the city¹⁴. The pond was surrounded by an impassible marsh and people had to wait until winter when "the swamp became frozen before it was possible to get to the lake itself¹⁵."

The creation of Central Park, today's Loring Park, was a turning point in the history of Oak Grove Street. Substantial homes had been built in the Central Park area and on Oak Grove Street before the park's establishment, but the construction of the park accelerated the trend¹⁶. Grading the slope south of the lake created sites for some of the city's most opulent mansions¹⁷. Oak Grove Street's hilly topography provided great views of Loring Park, Loring Pond, and Downtown. These views increased the demand and value of the land. Oak Grove Street quickly attracted professionals, (doctors, lawyers, and businessmen) including Charles Brayton Lyon, and some of the city's most socially prominent families in the neighborhood¹⁸. The Minneapolis Tribune reported in 1890, the same year that 425 Oak Grove Street was built, that "Oak Grove Street continues to furnish the most extensive house building of the finer grades¹⁹."

By 1892 most of the parcels on the two blocks directly to the south of Loring Park, 15th Street West and Oak Grove Street, were developed mainly with well designed single-family dwellings (Figure 8, Page 36). In contrast to the development of West 15th Street and Oak Grove Street, the two blocks to the south and further uphill, Clifton and Groveland Avenues had minimal development in 1892 (Figure 9, Page 38).

From a citywide perspective, the residential development of Loring Park helped give direction to the southwest "prestige" sector for Minneapolis. Loring Park was the first park land purchased by the Minneapolis Park Board²⁰. Although similar park plans were being created for southwest Minneapolis lakes such as Lake of the Isles, Lake Calhoun, and Lake Harriet at about the same time as Central Park, the residential development success and popularity of Loring Park showed Minneapolitans the value of living around the lakes and in the southwest portion of Minneapolis.

1920-Present

By the 1920s, the building diversity of Oak Grove Street increased. The early part of the 20th century gave rise to the construction of the Cathedral of St. Marks (1909) at 515 Oak Grove Street, the Young and Robert Apartments (1919) at 227-233 Oak Grove Street, the Oak Grove Apartment Hotel (1920) at 230 Oak Grove Street, the National Life Insurance Company (1923) at 430

Oak Grove Street, and the Woman’s Club (1927) at 410 Oak Grove Street. However, even with these new buildings along Oak Grove, the southern portion of Oak Grove Street from Spruce Place to West 15th Street was able to maintain the late 19th century/early 20th century housing stock (compare Figure 10, Page 39 and Figure 11, Page 40).

From the 1920s through the 1960’s a series of events and trends took a toll on the 19th century/early 20th century single family dwellings of Loring Park. First, with the expansion of the streetcar system and the increase in automobile ownership, wealthy families began to move further south and southwest of downtown to areas such as Lowry Hill, Kenwood, Lake of Isles, and neighborhoods further south around Lake Calhoun and Lake Harriet²¹. Additionally, the Great Depression in the 1930s increased the number of conversion of older houses, including some once-exclusive mansions south of Loring Park, to multifamily and non-residential uses. Also, the continued pressure for high-density use resulted in early redevelopment of many blocks as older dwellings and row houses were razed to make way for large apartment structures along LaSalle, Spruce, and Oak Grove²².

Shingle Style Architecture

A Field Guide to American Houses states the following about the Shingle Style:

“Most Shingle houses were built between 1880 and 1900. The style began and reached its highest expression in seaside resorts of the northeastern states. Fashionable summer destinations such as Newport, Cape Cod, eastern Long Island, and coastal Maine had numerous architect-designed cottages in the style. From this fashionable base, well publicized in cotemporary architectural magazines, the style spread throughout the country.

The Shingle architectural style, however, never gained the wide popularity of its contemporary, the Queen Anne style, and thus, Shingle houses are relatively uncommon except in coastal New England.

The Shingle style, like the Stick and spindlework Queen Anne, was a uniquely American adaptation of other traditions. Its roots are threefold: 1. From the Queen Anne it borrowed wide porches, shingled surfaces, and asymmetrical forms. 2. From the Colonial Revival it adapted gambrel roofs, rambling lean-to additions, classical columns, and Palladian windows. 3. from the contemporaneous Richardsonian Romanesque it borrowed an emphasis on irregular, sculpted shapes²³."

The common characteristics of the Shingle Style include²⁴:

- Wall cladding and roofing of continuous wood shingles (most examples now have the original wooden roofing replaced by composition shingles);
- Asymmetrical façade with irregular, steeply pitched roof line;
- Roofs usually have intersecting cross gables and multi-level eaves;
- Commonly have extensive porches;
- Rugged appearing stone or brick used as contrasting materials on lowest story;
- Small paned windows often forming horizontal bands;
- Restrained ornamentation;
- Towers (found in about one-third of Shingle houses, are more likely to be integrated more fully into the overall design rather than as fully developed elements)²⁵.

The Shingle Style flourished in Minneapolis in the 1890s²⁶. The popularity of the style can be attributed to Harry Wild Jones, who introduced the Shingle Style to Minneapolis²⁷. Two examples of Harry Wild Jones' residential structures built in the Shingle Style are the Harrington Beard House (1888) at 5100 Nicollet Avenue and the Harry Wild Jones House (1887) at 5101 Nicollet Avenue (Figure 14, Page 43). Both of these houses are locally designated. Even though the Shingle Style had a period of popularity in Minneapolis, Shingle Style houses are less common compared to the Queen Anne and Colonial Revival styles.

The Charles B. Lyon House is another prime example of the Shingle Style as it exhibits most of the common characteristics of the style including: the wood shingle cladding, asymmetrical façade with irregular, steeply pitched roof line, roof with an intersecting cross gable, multi-level eaves, a full-length porch, rugged stone foundation, small paned windows that form a horizontal band, restrained ornamentation (compared to Queen Anne style), prominent porch columns, textured wood shingles, and an asymmetrical placed tower that blends into the main volume of the house.

The design of the Charles B. Lyon House is substantially different compared to the Harrington Beard and the Harry W. Jones houses. The Charles B. Lyon house contains a side gabled roof compared to the gambrel roofed Harrington Beard House and the hipped roof Harry W. Jones House. In addition, the Charles B. Lyon House contains a full front porch something that is not a part of the design of the other shingle style houses.

Charles B. Lyon (1858-1945)

Charles B. Lyon was born in Ichn, Michigan in 1858. He married his wife Martha in 1883 in Marquette, Michigan²⁸. That same year, Charles and Martha moved to Minneapolis²⁹. In 1887, Charles and Martha lived with Charles' father, Daniel B. Lyon in the newly constructed house at 415 Oak Grove Street. In 1891, when the home at 425 Oak Grove (original address 419 Oak Grove Street) was completed, it was the home address for the families of Charles B. and Daniel H. Lyon. Charles and Martha had three children, Bertha, Georgia, and Barbara. Daniel B. Lyon also built the house at 419 Oak Grove Street. When it was completed in 1892, Daniel B. Lyon and his family moved there.

C.B. Lyon lived in the house at 425 Oak Grove until his death at the age of 87 in 1945. Mr. Lyon was the owner of the first wholesale chemical firm in the Northwest³⁰. Charles, Martha, and their three daughters were featured in the Society section of the Star Tribune on numerous occasions for weddings, trips, and guest arrivals.

Master Builder and State Senator Senator: F.G. McMillan (1856-1918)

The contractor who built 425 Oak Grove Street, Frank Griggs (F.G.) McMillan, was born in 1856 in Danville, Vermont³¹. Mr. McMillan was a resident of Minneapolis from 1878 until his death on May 5, 1918. F.G. McMillan was a contractor and builder in Minneapolis who worked with some of the city's top architects including William M. Kenyon, William Channing Whitney, and Long, Lamoreaux, and Long³². In his obituary, Mr. McMillan was described by the Minneapolis Star as a "pioneer builder in the city³³." F.G. McMillan built a number of significant buildings in Minneapolis including Butler Square North, the Pillsbury Library, and West High School (Figure 15, Page 44)³⁴. In addition to the residential building at 425 Oak Grove Street, Mr. McMillan built other prominent homes including the N.E. Hutchings House at 1607 Mount Curve Avenue, the I.A. Hazlett House at 1802 Colfax Avenue, and his own residence at 700 10th Avenue Southeast.

While F.G. McMillan’s construction career has not received the same recognition of Theron Potter Haley, the quality and grandness of the structures that he built demonstrates a characteristic style and quality.

Among the structures that Mr. McMillan is known to have built, the Butler Square North Building and the Pillsbury Library are contributing buildings to historic districts; Warehouse District and St. Anthony Falls respectively. He also built West High School (1907), which was at Hennepin Avenue and 28th Street (current location of the Kenwood Isles Condominium). West High School was a sturdy Classical Revival design featuring large arched entries to either side of a pedimented central pavilion³⁵.

Mr. McMillan’s residential structures include 1607 Mount Curve Avenue and 1802 Colfax Avenue which are considered contributing buildings to potential historic districts; Mount Curve potential historic district and Groveland Addition potential historic district respectively. Although F.G. McMillan has a commercial and civic building protected as contributing structures to historic districts, currently, none of his residential structures are designated.

In addition to being a prolific builder, Mr. McMillan was a two-term state senator representing the City of Minneapolis. He was considered one of the leading Democrats in Minnesota in his time³⁶. Among his positions as the state senator was chairman of the senate committee that made the recommendation to the entire legislative body on choosing the location of the current state capital building.

In 1893, the senate committee overseeing the state capitol location ended up recommending to the entire Senate body that the capitol be placed on the site of the previous capitol building, which is the location of the existing 1905 Cass Gilbert designed capitol building. The senate committee vote was 4-1.

Frank Griggs McMillan was the lone senator to vote against this location recommendation. Many suspected at the time that Mr. McMillan had motives of relocating the capitol to Loring Park or somewhere else in Minneapolis (Figure 20, Page 49). However, it later became clear that Mr. McMillan was not advocating to relocate the capitol building to Minneapolis. His dissenting from the majority opinion was based on the specific location of the proposed capitol. He felt that location was limited for expansion and that it was “so far removed from close proximity to the business district of the city that future generations will wonder at the lack of wisdom displayed by her capitol commissioners, or by the legislature which will be responsible for such a blunder, if one is made³⁷.” Mr. McMillan also voiced his opposition about limiting the search for an architect to those living in Minnesota.

Even after the Minnesota state senate and the house voted to have the capitol building at its current location in 1893, Minneapolis business leaders continued to try and lure the capitol to Loring Park³⁸. In 1895, a resolution was adopted at the Minneapolis Board of Trade offering the state the site of Loring Park with some adjacent land (43 acres total), and $500,000 towards construction costs, if the capitol was moved to Minneapolis. F.G. McMillan stated he opposed the resolution on the grounds that it would upset the balance made among Minnesota cities during territorial times which awarded St. Paul the state capital, Minneapolis the state university, Stillwater the prison, and St. Peter the insane asylum³⁹.

F.G. McMillan's additional civic work includes serving six years as a member of the Minneapolis board of education and a member of the Minneapolis park board for two years. He was also a member of the board of charities and corrections under both Mayor James C. Haynes and Mayor Wallace G. Nye. Under Governor John Lind, Mr. McMillan served as the state board of equalization⁴⁰.

PART 3: RATIONALE FOR LOCAL HISTORIC DESIGNATION

Local historic designation is an official action that promotes the preservation of historic resources by recognizing specific people, places, and events that are deemed to be significant in relation to the history and heritage of Minneapolis. Through the requirements set out in the Heritage Preservation chapter of the City's Code of Ordinances, the act of designation establishes a series of protections that are administered through the ordinance to ensure protection of significant places throughout the city against demolition or in appropriate alterations.

Designation Criteria

Title 23, Chapter 599.210 of Minneapolis Code of Ordinances lists seven criteria which are considered when trying to determine whether a property is worthy of local designation as a landmark because of its particular significance. The Charles B. Lyon House appears eligible for designation as an individual landmark per the ordinance criteria 3, 4, and 6. It does not appear significant under criteria 1, 2, 5, and 7.

Criteria #1: The property is associated with significant events or with periods that exemplify broad patterns of cultural, political, economic, or social history.

The property in question does not appear to be the site of historically significant events. While it did merit mention in the Minneapolis Tribune in numerous articles, such mention generally referred to its owners, the Lyons, and their social occurrences.

Criteria #2: The property is associated with the lives of significant persons or groups.

The property in question does not appear to be significant based on its association with the lives of significant persons or groups. While Charles B. Lyon was the owner of the first wholesale chemical firm in the Northwest, and the Lyon family was featured in the Society section of the Star Tribune on numerous occasions for weddings, trips, and guest arrivals, these items on their own do not rise to the level of significance under designation Criterion #2.

Criteria #3: The property contains or is associated with distinctive elements of city or neighborhood identity.

The subject property was originally an elegant single family residence constructed in the fashionable, wealthy neighborhood that sprung up around Minneapolis' first city park: Central Park (now Loring Park). It was the 19th century post-Central Park development on Oak Grove Street that helped give direction to the affluent residential development in the southwest sector of Minneapolis.

Oak Grove Street has seen dramatic change over time. Many of the late 19th century structures were replaced with early 20th century structures. As development pressures continued more of the late 19th century structures were replaced with surface parking lots and late 20th century/early 21 century multifamily buildings. Of the thirty-four plus 19th century single-family structures that stood along Oak Park Street in 1914, only four remain: 425 Oak Grove Street and three others. As one of the few remaining tangible remnants of this lost heritage, 425 Oak Grove Street is historically significant.

In addition to the Charles B. Lyon House being an important remaining example of the early southwest development trend, 425 Oak Grove Street is also important to the significance of Oak Grove Street itself. The Charles B. Lyon House is the gateway to the residential portion of Oak Grove Street from the west (Figure 1, Page 29 and Figure 2, Page 30). The Charles B. Lyon House is the first residential structure on Oak Grove Street for those traveling east on Oak Grove Street. In addition, the Charles B. Lyon House is vital to help retain the 19th century setting that exists with the proximity of 419 Oak Grove Street and 337 Oak Grove Street. If one of these houses is demolished it will have an adverse impact on the residential setting of the other houses.

Criteria #4: The property embodies the distinctive characteristics of an architectural or engineering type or style, or method of construction.

As a residence embodying the distinctive characteristics of the Shingle architectural style, the Charles B. Lyon House is historically significant. The house contains many of the defining architectural style elements. The house's wood shingle cladding and asymmetrical tower that blends into the main volume of the house are character defining features of the house and the Shingle Style. In addition to these features, the Charles B. Lyon House has a roof that is steeply pitched and contains an intersecting cross gable, a full-length porch with simple porch columns, and small paned windows that form a horizontal band.

The design of the Charles B. Lyon House is substantially different compared to the two Shingle-Style houses that are locally designated already; the Harrington Beard and the Harry W. Jones houses. The Charles B. Lyon house contains a side gabled roof compared to the gambrel roofed Harrington Beard House and the hipped roof Harry W. Jones House. In addition, the Charles B. Lyon House contains a full front porch which is not a part of the design of the other shingle style houses.

Criteria #5: The property exemplifies a landscape design or development pattern distinguished by innovation, rarity, uniqueness or quality of design or detail.

The subject property does not appear significant under criterion 5. Turf grass, an asphalt driveway that leads to parking in the rear, and two retaining walls are the major landscape features. Such features as the turf grass and driveway are quite common to other residences in Minneapolis. Retaining walls are an important feature in Loring Park because of the hilly topography. The two retaining walls of the Charles B. Lyon House do not appear to be original. However, they are an important feature in helping retain the original grading of the house. The property does not contain a rear yard due to a large rear addition in 1987.

Criteria #6: The property exemplifies works of master builders, engineers, designers, artists, craftsmen or architects.

As a Shingle Style residence built by master builder, Frank Griggs (F.G.) McMillan, 425 Oak Grove Street is historically significant. The National Register Bulletin, "How to Apply the National Register Criteria for Evaluation" explains the qualifications a landmark must meet in order to be considered the "work of a master":

A master is a figure of generally recognized greatness in a field, a known craftsman of consummate skill, or an anonymous craftsman whose work is distinguishable from others by its characteristic style and quality. The property must express a particular phase in the development of the master's career, an aspect of his or her work, or a particular idea or theme in his or her craft⁴¹.

The residence at 425 Oak Grove Street expresses a particular phase in the development of the master's career. The Charles B. Lyon House is the earliest extant known structure of Mr. McMillan's career. The high-style designed home was likely helpful in setting up his career of being a well respected builder in residential, commercial, and institutional building.

Criteria #7: The property has yielded, or may be likely to yield, information important in prehistory or history.

No evidence was found that demonstrates that the property has yielded, or may be likely to yield, information important in prehistory. Records available at the Minnesota State Historic Preservation Office indicate no archaeological surveys have been conducted on or near the property in question.

Integrity of Historic Resource

The Charles B. Lyon House possesses the ability to communicate its historical significance, as evident in its retention of all seven aspects of integrity as defined by the U.S. Department of the Interior:

Location: The Charles B. Lyon House at 425 Oak Grove Street remains in its original location and thus possesses integrity of location.

Design: The property embodies distinctive characteristics of the Shingle Style and retains its architectural integrity. The C.B. Lyon house, which was built by F.G. McMillan, maintains a consistent design aesthetic today as when it was built. The retention of the original materials makes this a prime example of the Shingle architectural style.

Setting: The Loring Park neighborhood, in particular Oak Grove Street, has changed since the time of construction of the Charles B. Lyon house at the end of the 19th century. The street was lined with opulent single-family dwellings. The number of these 19th century examples has been reduced substantially, however, the western stretch of Oak Grove Street still includes the Charles B. Lyon House at 425 Oak Grove Street, the Daniel B. Lyon House at 419 Oak Grove Street, and the Lund House at 337 Oak Grove Street. The combination of these houses in close proximity to one another help retain the late 19th century residential setting. If one of these houses are demolished it will have an adverse impact on the residential setting of the other houses.

Retaining walls are important feature in Loring Park because of the hilly topography. The two retaining walls of the Charles B. Lyon House do not appear to be original. However, they are an important feature in helping retain the original grading of the house. The property does not contain a rear yard due to a large rear addition in 1987.

Materials: The Charles B. Lyon retains its integrity of materials. Even though a third floor window and the first floor lap siding on the west elevation have been replaced, the house still contains many original elements including textured wood shingles, porch balustrade, leaded and diamond pane casement windows, modillion course, rafter tails, dentils, and a corbelled chimney.

Workmanship: The Charles B. Lyon House retains its integrity of workmanship. The Shingle Style was primarily used in the late 19th century. Most of the original materials remain and the Charles B. Lyon House is an authentic historic resource because of its high retention of details and materials.

Feeling: The Charles B. Lyon house retains its integrity of feeling. The close proximity of the subject property with the late 19th century houses at 419 Oak Grove Street and 337 Oak Grove Street are able to evoke the aesthetic and historic sense of a past period of time.

Association: The Charles B. Lyon House still retains its direct link to the original residential development of Central Park. The C.B. Lyon house was built five years after Central Park was completed. The house at 425 Oak Grove Street and those at 419 Oak Grove and 337 Oak Grove are the only houses of Oak Grove Street that can be directly associated with the opening of Central Park and the ensuing residential development. Furthermore, the location of the houses at 425, 419, and 337 Oak Grove Street near each other and Loring Park strengthens the historic significance of one another.

Other Considerations

Relationship to the body of locally-designated properties in Minneapolis

The City of Minneapolis designates properties that represent and reflect elements of the city's culture, social, economic, religious, political, architectural, or aesthetic history as local heritage landmarks. As of December 2010, one hundred fifty (150) individual properties are designated as landmarks in the City of Minneapolis.

Of the 150 locally designated landmarks, 58 are single-family houses. Loring Park has four of the 58 single-family landmarks: The Alden H. Smith House at 1400-1410 Harmon Place (1886), the Eugene J. Carpenter House at 300 Clifton Avenue (1906), the Elbert L. Carpenter House at 314 Clifton Avenue (1906), and the Charles C. Bovey House (1916) at 400 Clifton Avenue (Table 5, Page 22).

Even though Loring Park has four single-family residential landmarks, none of them capture the late 19th century development that took place south of Central Park after it was completed in 1885. Most of these 19th century houses have been demolished or moved to other locations in Minneapolis. It was the 19th century post-Central Park residential development on Oak Grove Street that helped give direction to the affluent residential development in the southwest sector of Minneapolis.

The City of Minneapolis has two landmarks designed in the Shingle Style (Table 5, Page 22), twelve landmarks in the Loring Park neighborhood (Table 6, Page 22), and nineteen landmarks that represent the period of construction from 1880-1889 (Table 7, Page 23). The City of Minneapolis has no individual landmarks that were built by Frank Griggs McMillan.

Relationship to the 1990 Minneapolis Preservation Plan

The proposed designation helps fulfill the goals outlined in the 1990 Minneapolis Preservation Plan by systematically studying a property for its potential for preservation.

Comprehensive and Long-Range Planning

Section 599.260 of the Heritage Preservation Regulations requires the planning director to submit all proposed designations to the City Planning Commission for review and comment on the proposal. In its review, the City Planning Commission shall consider but not be limited to the following factors:

- (1) The relationship of the proposed designation to the city's comprehensive plan.
- (2) The effect of the proposed designation on the surrounding area.
- (3) The consistency of the proposed designation with applicable development plans or development objectives adopted by the city council.

The relationship of the proposed designation to the city's comprehensive plan: The designation of the Charles B. Lyon House meets numerous policies of the Minneapolis Plan for Sustainable Growth.

Policy 3.7 states, "Maintain the quality, safety and unique character of the city's housing stock." The Charles B. Lyon House serves as an elegant example of Minneapolis' high-quality, safe, and unique housing: an example that has thrived for over a century.

Policy 8.1 states "Preserve, maintain, and designate districts, landmarks, and historic resources which serve as reminders of the city's architecture, history, and culture." By designating 425 Oak Grove Street as a landmark, the City will require the preservation of a building significant to the City and state for its association with a master builder, architectural style, and neighborhood development pattern. These three factors coalesced following the development of the city's first public park – a milestone for urban and park planning in this city so well known for its parks.

The effect of the proposed designation on the surrounding area: The proposed designation of the subject property will help protect one of the last remaining 19th century residential structures in the Loring Park neighborhood. It will also serve as a reminder of the neighborhood's history. This building is one of the longstanding features of this block.

The consistency of the proposed designation with applicable development plans or development objectives adopted by the City Council: The comprehensive plan identifies no small area plans that cover the area of the proposed landmark. However, The Citizens for the Loring Park Community is currently working on a small area plan for the neighborhood. The plan has not been adopted by the neighborhood or the city at the time of the writing of this designation study.

National Register Status

This property is not currently listed in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP).

State Designation

This property has not been designated by the state of Minnesota as a historic district, historic place, or historic site.

Proposed Period of Significance:

The building's period of significance is 1890-1945. This period begins when the building was constructed. It ends with the death of the original owner and commissioner of the design, Charles B. Layton.

5/18/2010 Nomination A1

Background: At the April 16, 2010, City Council meeting, Councilmember Lisa Goodman nominated the property at 425 Oak Grove Street (currently known as “Ready for Success”) for a candidate for local historic designation and to establish interim historic protections pursuant to Minneapolis Code of Ordinances §599.240(b) covering all internal and external alterations to buildings, accessory structures and landscape features on the property, including demolitions, additions, renovations and other improvements. At the April 16 City Council meeting, the Council adopted the nomination, and the Planning Director was directed to prepare the necessary documentation to bring a nomination forward to the Heritage Preservation Commission no later than June 22, 2010. The City Council adopted this motion.

Project Description: The Charles B. Lyon House is a three-story residence built circa 1880 in the Shingle architectural style. The house contains a complex roof including a side-gable and peak from tower that extends from the second floor to the third floor. The open front porch stretches the entire front façade; however, the eastern portion of the front porch has been enclosed.

5/18/2010 Nomination A2

In completing a preliminary search of previous historic research analysis, CPED found that the State Historic Preservation Office has an inventory file on the Charles B. Lyon House. In addition, 425 Oak Grove Street was also identified in the 1990 book, Shadow of the City, A History of the Loring Park, and inventoried in the 2008 Certified Local Government (CLG) survey of Loring Park, Elliot Park, and Lowry Hill East neighborhoods.

According to the Shadow of the City book, Charles B. Lyon was the owner of the first wholesale chemical firm in the Northwest. Charles B. Lyon lived in the house at 425 Oak Grove Street for several decades and resided there until his death in 1945 at the age of 87.

B. CONSIDERATION FOR NOMINATION

Per section 599.230 of the Heritage Preservation Regulations, the Heritage Preservation Commission shall review all complete nomination applications. If the Heritage Preservation Commission determines that a nominated property or property appears to meet at least one of the local designation criteria the commission may direct the planning director to commence a designation study of the property.

SIGNIFICANCE

The subject property may be eligible for designation as an individual landmark per the following criterion:

- (2) The property is associated with the lives of significant persons or groups

Charles B. Lyon was the owner of the first wholesale chemical firm in the Northwest. Mr. Lyon lived at 425 Oak Grove Street for several decades and resided there until his death in 1945 at the age of 87.

- (4) The property embodies the distinctive characteristics of an architectural or engineering type or style, or method of construction.

The Charles B. Lyon House was built in the Shingle architectural style in 1880. The house is true to the Shingle architectural form in that it is asymmetrical, contains a complex roof design, a half tower on the front façade, open front porch, and bay window.

Further research, through the designation study process, is warranted to determine if the building at 425 Oak Grove Street meets local designation Criterion 2 and 4. The subject property may also be eligible for designation as a landmark under the other five designation criteria. Such an analysis would be conducted as part of a designation study.

B. PUBLIC COMMENTS

As of May 12, 2010, CPED has not received any public comments concerning the nomination application.

C. APPLICABLE ORDINANCES

Chapter 599. Heritage Preservation Regulation

ARTICLE V. DESIGNATION

599.210. Designation criteria. The following criteria shall be considered in determining whether a property is worthy of designation as a landmark or historic district because of its historical, cultural, architectural, archaeological or engineering significance:

- (1) The property is associated with significant events or with periods that exemplify broad patterns of cultural, political, economic or social history.
- (2) The property is associated with the lives of significant persons or groups.
- (3) The property contains or is associated with distinctive elements of city or neighborhood identity.
- (4) The property embodies the distinctive characteristics of an architectural or engineering type or style, or method of construction.
- (5) The property exemplifies a landscape design or development pattern distinguished by innovation, rarity, uniqueness or quality of design or detail.
- (6) The property exemplifies works of master builders, engineers, designers, artists, craftsmen or architects.
- (7) The property has yielded, or may be likely to yield, information important in prehistory or history.

599.230. Commission decision on nomination. The commission shall review all complete nomination applications. If the commission determines that a nominated property appears to meet at least one of the criteria for designation contained in section 599.210, the commission may direct the planning director to prepare or cause to be prepared a designation study of the property. In cases where an application for demolition is initiated by the property owner, the planning director may determine that the property owner bears the full financial responsibility of conducting the designation study. In all cases, the planning director shall define the scope of services for a designation study, review qualifications of agent conducting study and make a determination of what constitutes a final submission upon completion.

599.240. Interim protection. (a) Purpose. Interim protection is established to protect a nominated property from destruction or inappropriate alteration during the designation process.

(b) Effective date. Interim protection shall be in effect from the date of the commission's decision to commence a designation study of a nominated property until the city council makes a decision regarding the designation of the property, or for twelve (12) months, whichever comes first. Interim protection may be extended for such additional periods as the commission may deem appropriate and necessary to protect the designation process, not exceeding a total additional period of eighteen (18) months. The commission shall hold a public hearing on a proposed extension of interim protection as provided in section 599.170.

(c) Scope of restrictions. During the interim protection period, no alteration or minor alteration of a nominated property shall be allowed except where authorized by a certificate of appropriateness or a certificate of no change, as provided in this chapter. (2001-Or-029, § 1, 3-2-01)

D. FINDINGS

1. The nominated property may potentially meet two of the criteria for designation contained in section 599.210 (Criterion 2 and 4).

E. STAFF RECOMMENDATION

CPED recommends that the Heritage Preservation Commission adopt staff findings and approve the nomination of 425 Oak Grove Street; establish interim protection; and direct the Planning Director to prepare or cause to be prepared a designation study.

RE: Local designation of the Charles B. Lyon House, 425 Oak Grove Street, MHS Referral No. 2011-0976

Dear Mr. Byers,

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the above referenced designation. It has been reviewed pursuant to Minnesota Statutes §471.193, subd. 6., and Section 599.210 of the City of Minneapolis Code of Ordinances.

The Charles B. Lyon House exemplifies an architecturally significant Shingle Style residence, as seen in its wood shingled walls, asymmetrical façade with irregular, steeply pitched roof line, and front tower that is blended into the main volume of the house. The Lyon House gains additional significance because it was constructed by master builder Frank Griggs (F.G.) McMillan, a contractor and builder who worked with many of the leading architects in Minneapolis during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. The Lyon House is a good candidate for local designation under the City of Minneapolis criteria 3, 4, and 6.

If you have any questions regarding our assessment of this property, please contact this office.

Sincerely,

MEMORANDUM

TO: City Planning Commission
FROM: Aaron Hanauer, Senior City Planner, 612-673-2494
DATE: February 24, 2011
RE: Charles Brayton Lyon House (425 Oak Grove Street) Designation Study – CPC Review and Comment

Designation Study Review and Comment

Chapter 599, Heritage Preservation, of the Minneapolis Code of Ordinances outlines the review process for designation studies. The City is required to submit the designation study to the State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO) and the City Planning Commission (CPC) for review and comment. A copy of the draft designation study has been submitted to the Minnesota SHPO. Enclosed is a copy of the draft designation study for your review and comment.

Section 599.260 of the Heritage Preservation Regulations requires the planning director to submit all proposed designations to the City Planning Commission for review and comment on the proposal within thirty (30) days. In its review, the City Planning Commission shall consider but not be limited to the following factors:

- (1) The relationship of the proposed designation to the city's comprehensive plan.
- (2) The effect of the proposed designation on the surrounding area.
- (3) The consistency of the proposed designation with applicable development plans or development objectives adopted by the city council.

This item will be on the February 24, 2011 Committee of the Whole agenda for discussion and comment.

The following memorandum analyzes the proposed designation using the three factors outlined in the section 599.260 of the ordinance.

The relationship of the proposed designation to the city's comprehensive plan: The designation of the Charles B. Lyon House meets numerous policies of the Minneapolis Plan for Sustainable Growth.

- Policy 3.7 states, “Maintain the quality, safety and unique character of the city’s housing stock.” The Charles B. Lyon House serves as an elegant example of Minneapolis’ high-quality, safe, and unique housing: an example that has thrived for over a century.
- Policy 8.1 states “Preserve, maintain, and designate districts, landmarks, and historic resources which serve as reminders of the city’s architecture, history, and culture.” By designating 425 Oak Grove Street as a landmark, the City will require the preservation of a building significant to the City and state for its association with a master builder, architectural style, and neighborhood development pattern. These three factors coalesced following the development of the city’s first public park – a milestone for urban and park planning in this city so well known for its parks.

The effect of the proposed designation on the surrounding area: The proposed designation of the subject property will help slow the destruction of 19th-century single family residences in an area that has seen substantial redevelopment, primarily in the form of higher-density residential uses and parking areas. It will also serve as a reminder of the neighborhood’s history. The building is one of the most longstanding features of this block and the neighborhood.

The consistency of the proposed designation with applicable development plans or development objectives adopted by the City Council: The comprehensive plan identifies no small area plans that cover the area of the proposed landmark. The Citizens for a Loring Park Community, the neighborhood group that strongly supports the proposed designation, is mid-way through the development of a small area plan tentatively titled, “The Loring Park Master Plan.” Prepared by a consultant with advice from CPED-Planning, the plan is due to be completed in summer 2011.
